

Life behind the Iron Curtain

"Cold War Eastern Europe is a truly indispensable resource for students and academics alike studying the history of Eastern Europe, Communism and the Cold War. Due to the high quality of British diplomatic reporting, the collection will immensely enhance comparative research of the Soviet Bloc countries' history."

Csaba Békés, Research Chair, Centre for Social Sciences, Institute for Political Science, Hungarian Academy of Sciences, Budapest.

At a Glance

During the Cold War, The U.K Foreign Office and their embassies and consulates throughout Eastern Europe were interested in every aspect of political, economic, cultural, social and dissident life behind the 'Iron Curtain'. Reports covered a hugely diverse range of issues, from state leadership to protest movements; agricultural output to international trade agreements; scientific progress to minority populations; religion to sporting events; and state run media to popular culture.

Cold War Eastern Europe, Module I: 1953-1960 provides access to over six thousand primary source files from the political departments of the U.K Foreign Office. Commencing in 1953, the year of Stalin's death, this resource provides a comprehensive, English-language history of post-Stalinist Eastern Europe covering every country in Eastern Europe. Enabling comparative study of trends across Eastern Europe, or in-depth analysis of individual countries.

Cold War Eastern Europe, Module II: 1961-1966 covers a series of events that altered the trajectory of the Cold War, including: the construction of the Berlin Wall; the Cuban Missile crisis; the rise of Leonid Brezhnev and the removal of Nikita Khrushchev as the head of the Soviet Union; the enactment of drastic reforms to the Soviet Union's economy; and a deepening of ideological differences between China and the Soviet Union that culminated in the Sino-Soviet split.

This modular collection is available on one platform and users with access to both modules are able to search and browse across all metadata fields. Built to facilitate both teaching and research with advanced search functionality, Cold War Eastern Europe, will be of interest to teachers, researchers and students of international relations, politics, resistance and human rights, history and cultural studies.

The closing years of the 1960s saw attempted reforms and social change in Eastern Bloc members Czechoslovakia (Prague Spring) and Poland (1968 crisis and protests of 1970). This was followed by re-instatement of the Soviet model through suppression from security forces and military intervention by the Soviet Union and other Warsaw Pact members.

The period of "Détente" from 1967 through the 1970s saw the steady easing of tensions between the East and West, as well as growing co-operation in the Four Power Agreements on Berlin and the Conference on Security and Co-operation in Europe, culminating in Richard Nixon's visit to Moscow in 1975.

Module III provides in-depth reporting on and analyses of these events, as well as the continued economic stagnation of the Eastern Bloc countries.

Key events in Module III

- Sino-Soviet border conflict
- Vietnam War
- Summit between Lyndon B. Johnson and Aleksei Kosygin in Glassboro, New Jersey
- Harold Wilson's visit to Moscow
- Prague Spring
- 1968 Polish Political Crisis
- Warsaw Pact Invasion of Czechoslovakia
- Strategic Arms Limitation Talks
- Polish protests of December 1970
- Croatian Spring
- Four-Power Agreement on Berlin

- Richard Nixon's visit to the Soviet Union and Poland
- Conference on Security and
 Co-operation in Europe
- Western Recognition of East Germany
- Richard Nixon's visit to Moscow
- Harold Wilson and James Callaghan's visit to Moscow
- Helsinki Accords
